X (Twitter) — Pier 35, Brooklyn (Night Skyline)

Chosen Image: Pier 35 / Brooklyn at night with bridge lights

Why this image for X:

X rewards mood, commentary, and cultural reflection. This image feels editorial and contemplative rather than promotional, which fits how people engage on X through ideas, storytelling, and perspective rather than pure aesthetics.

Campaign Explanation:

This Korpo Travels campaign uses nighttime New York to position the brand as a travel voice focused on atmosphere and hidden moments. Targeting photographers, writers, and urban explorers, the magazine-style cover encourages reflection on how cities feel after dark rather than how they look at peak hours. Engagement is driven through reposts, quote tweets, and discussion around lesser-known travel spots. Success will be measured through impressions, repost rate, and follower growth from creative and media-focused users, indicating expansion into a curious audience.

TikTok — Brooklyn Sky with Airplane

Chosen Image: Minimal blue sky with plane crossing “Brooklyn / New York City” typography

Why this image for TikTok:

TikTok favors motion, simplicity, and transformation. The airplane and open sky naturally lend themselves to animation, transitions, and reveal-style storytelling.

Campaign Explanation:

This campaign turns the magazine cover into a short cinematic TikTok, showing the process of building the cover—image first, typography second, final reveal last. Targeting Gen Z and younger millennials, the campaign focuses on discovery rather than polish, highlighting the creative process behind travel photography. Engagement goals include watch time, completion rate, and shares. Success is measured through For You page reach, profile visits, and cross-platform traffic to Korpo Travels’ Instagram.
